

Dog allergy testing

If your dog's constantly scratching or seems uncomfortable in their own skin, it's worth finding out why. We take a small sample of their fur and send it off using the Healthy Stuff testing kit, which checks for 374 different allergens and intolerances.

You'll get a full report back, and we can set up a follow-up consultation to work through what it means for their diet or the products you use. You don't need to be a day care member to book this.

Worth booking if you're noticing: scratching or broken skin, patches of fur loss, rashes around the ears, belly, feet or face, swelling near the mouth or eyes, digestive upset, or eyes that are red, watery or itchy.

Best from age 1 onwards, as results in younger puppies can be unreliable. This service supports, but doesn't replace, advice from your own vet.

Nutritional consultations

Diet affects more than just weight. It shows up in their coat, their energy, their joints, sometimes even their behaviour.

Our canine nutrition consultant will work through your dog's age, breed, activity level, and any health conditions or allergies, then help you put together a plan, whether that's choosing the right food, transitioning to a raw diet, working out the right supplements, or figuring out how much and how often they should be eating.

P.S: This service supports, but doesn't replace, advice from your own vet.
Pricing: from £100 per consultation
